

Tony Bartoni learns he is no longer being sought by the police, and leaves the islands to live a normal life in Miami. He moves in with Christi, a nurse, who is a sexually aggressive Buddhist of sorts. His criminal connections catch up with him, and his lust for excitement leads him into a painful and disastrous effort to organize the landing of a shipload of marijuana. He recovers, and with little resistance is talked into a drug run with Babe, the crew who is part of the deal with the owner of the sailboat. They become lovers before disaster strikes, and she finishes the trip without him. Trying to stay away from drugs he takes a job as Captain of a rust bucket lumber ship, and in Belize reunites with Babe who is hiding out from criminal types. They decide to live happily-ever-after, but his past catches up with him.
